WILLIAM IRVINE AT OTTAWA

The following is taken from Hansard:

Mr. William Irvine (Wetaskiwin): Mr. Speaker, I wish to draw the attention of the house for a very few minutes to a question of considerable importance, at least to working men. I ask the government to consider the desirability of opening the parliamentary session at a different time of the year from that which is now the practice. I do not know whether the month of February was selected to inconvenience western members as much as possible, particularly farmer members, but were that the purpose it has been very well executed. It is the custom for parliament to meet in February, or perhaps even later. As of the eastern members and added to that of the western members. This would not increase the taxation in any way, while it would make up some of the difference which now exists, as between eastern and western members. It is clear I think that eastern members have a little advantage over those from the west, and if $4,000 be a reasonable indemnity for a man who can be in his office every day in the year it is very unfair to a member from Vancouver or from any of the western provinces. Even if for some minor reason eastern members would rather be here in the spring of the year, I submit that in view of all the circumstances they ought to be prepared to assist us in our effort to impress upon the government the advisability of changing the time at which parliament meets making it November instead of February.

In conclusion, I wish to say this. There is a great deal more in the suggestion than may appear on the surface, for the question of indemnity is one which lends us to another question of moment to the people of Canada and to the democratic system in general. I believe that it is becoming more and more the tendency that only rich men can come to this parliament; and poor men, however able they may be, may ultimately be debarred except they may possibly receive assistance from some other source to enable them to attend parliament—which is perhaps a principle equally as dangerous as the principle of having only rich men in parliament. And there is a tendency in Canada for that principle to take root. I think we can find instances, without going back very far, of outstanding men of the main parties in Canada who have been assisted or indemnified by private persons—we do not know who they are—in order that they might be in a position to give their services to their country. Now I offer no criticism of any individual; I do not know any case in which this has been done wherein the individual concerned was not an outstanding man whose services Canada could ill afford to lose, and of which we are very glad to have had the benefit. That is not my criticism, however; my criticism is that the principle is a very bad one. At least we ought to know in every case who the man is that subsidizes funds, and I would rather advocate that Canada be prepared to give, to those whose services the country accepts, a remuneration sufficient to maintain them, having full control over them, than prejudice their services by allowing private individuals to keep them in public life.

I hope that in view of all the circumstances the government will listen to our request that parliament meet in the fall instead of in the spring, and that we be careful not to allow mere wealth to supersede other qualities in this parliament. I frankly admit, of course, that I should be very glad indeed if I had sufficient political influence to be worth $200,000 to anybody outside parliament. Unfortunately, however, I am not in that happy position and so I stand for the democratic principle of having the people of Canada pay the services of their representatives. And if it were necessary I would even suggest that the personnel of parliament be reduced by half, paying the members an adequate compensation, and applying the same principle to ministers, reducing their number to the same extent, and adequately remunerating them in order to keep in public life men whose services are of value to the country.

There is a further reason why I think eastern members ought to give favourable consideration to my plan. I think it is clear to any one who looks at the matter from the point of view of indemnities that the western members are discriminated against. No man can be here steadily for four months and attend to any kind of personal business. He has practically to give it up. That is true also of the maritime members. I do not know whether one should mention the word "indemnity" or not. Far be it from me to suggest any increase! Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Irvine: I would not think of making such a suggestion. I know that all parties are very much afraid of this question, especially the leaders. I might go so far as to suggest that $1000 be taken off the indemnity

STRAYED GIRLS ARE RECOVERED

Camrose, July 5.—Two little girls, Dorothy Ham and Phyllis Burgess, each about nine years of age, caused considerable excitement among the Camrose people summering at Miquelon lake, when they did not return early Wednesday evening.

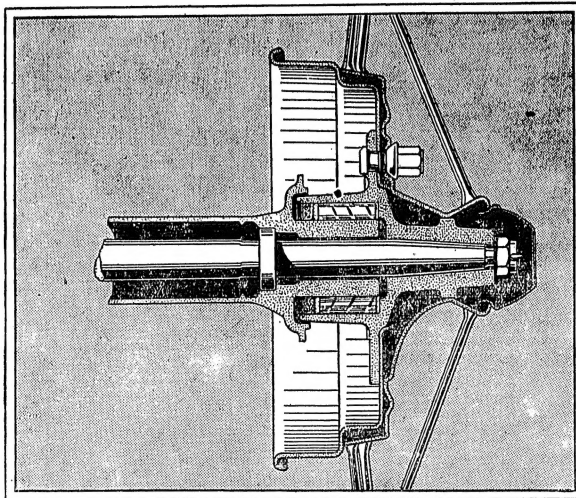

Without telling their parents of their intention they started out about the middle of the afternoon to circle the south lake. They did not know that a "narrows" separated the south and middle lakes and when they came to the strait the hiking program could not be carried out.

About 100 automobiles conveyed people to the lake. The girls were tracked to the narrows and for a time further traces of them were lost. The anxiety was relieved about 11 o'clock at night when they were discovered some six miles north of the summer resort none the worse for their experience.

THE FORD CAR REAR AXLE

Expense no object in Achieving Perfection

THE rear axle of the Ford car is of the three-quarter floating type with spiral bevel gear. The pinion hub is exceptionally heavy, and, as the pinion is carried on double taper roller bearings, perfect alignment of the gear is always assured. The rear axle has a total of four roller bearings which add considerably to the cost of manufacture but are a protection for the owner against wear.

Special care is taken to insure silence in the pinion and ring gears. These are made up in sets and carefully matched, each set being run in to eliminate all possibility of noise in operation.

The differential side gears are forged integral on the rear axle shafts and the teeth then cut. This permits of lighter and more simple construction. The shafts are unusually strong, and, as the centre line of the wheel comes over the bearings, there is no overhang of the axle shaft, and it has no weight to support.

The use of malleable castings is eliminated in this new axle housing which is made entirely of steel. Bell forgings welded to steel tubing make up the shaft housing which is bolted to an all steel differential housing. The care and skill devoted to the manufacture and assembly of rear axle parts is typical of the high standards of Ford engineering.

ANOTHER SCHOOL BURNED IN NORTH SASKATCHEWAN

Saskatoon, July 6.—Another northern Saskatchewan school house was in ruins last night from fire, believed to be of incendiary origin. This time Thistleford school, about two miles north of Ceepee on the Borden side of the North Saskatchewan river, was razed. Ceepee district is a Donkhor settlement. Mounted police are investigating the fire which was discovered about 4:30 Friday morning and followed closely the burning of four schools in the Balne Lake district, which is directly north.

THE TIGER TRAIL

by Edison Marshall Illustrations by RAY FREEMAN

WHAT HAPPENED BEFORE

Dr. Long is visiting Southley Downs to which he is conducted by Ahmad Das, an Oriental. There he meets Mr. Southley, whom a detective friend, Alexander Pierce, has told him to watch, and his son Ernest Southley, Mr. Hayward and his son Vilas, and then Josephine Southley, whom he had seen faint on the train. Josephine tells him the story of Southley Downs and its ghost, which is not the ghost of a human being but of a tiger.

Dr. Long has a quarrel with Vilas Hayward over Josephine, and finds that the Haywards have a strange authority over the Southleys. He is ordered to leave Southley Downs. The rain prevents him leaving at once. Dr. Long and Ernest go out on the road in the rain looking for the tracks of a tiger that Ernest says are there.

They find the tracks. Later Ernest and Dr. Long see a prowling creature in the hall of Southley Downs. This frightens the elder Hayward, who also sees it. Ernest begins to feel that Ahmad Das is perpetrating some devilry.

The elder Hayward is later found dead, his neck broken as if by a giant's blow.

The coroner and police arrive in order to investigate.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Sam's other errands he had done with dispatch.

"And where did you pick up the rowboat?" I asked. "You went over in Mr. Southley's duck canoe."

The question drew a long and detailed explanation. The motor craft, it seemed, had been procured by the coroner, and was to be used to convey the body. The duck canoe was not large enough to bring any supplies, so Mr. Southley had ordered Sam to procure a large, well-made rowboat to go back and forth in. At first he had despaired of finding any, until the old man who had steered on the way back to the house encountered him and offered his own boat and services for hire. He was a quaint old character that lived by the river at the edge of the city, and he had

Her Little Boy Was Very Ill With Summer Complaint

Mrs. Ray Fisher, Lebert, Sask., writes: "For over a month, last summer, my little boy was suffering from summer complaint. He got so bad there began to be traces of blood in his stool, and anything he ate would not stay on his stomach very long. He became so weak he could not stand up. A neighbor recommended

"Discouraged and in despair I sent for a bottle, not expecting any more benefit than from the many other medicines I had used, but to my surprise I noticed a change after he had taken a few doses, and before the bottle was half used he was the same happy, healthy boy he was before he took sick."

heard of Sam's inquiries. But he insisted that he be carried along to handle his own boat. The reason was rather obvious. The old man was evidently in need of the few extra dollars that his own services would bring.

"And what's the old fellow's name?" "Robin—and he talked like a cockney."

Southley and I were with the Inspector—his name turned out to be Freeman—when he examined the body. He made no comment. Since I had given up all hope of a greater detective coming to our aid, I turned over all the clues I had gathered to him. He was entirely scornful.

"Like as not you and young Southley spoiled a whole lot more clues than you found, by tramping around the body."

"We were careful about that, Inspector," I assured him.

"I don't mean to infer your motives weren't the best," he went on with a word of tact, "but amateur aid doesn't help any, as a rule. The hat is evidently the property of the murdered man. This cufflink—"

He examined the cuff of the silken shirt that Hayward wore. "It's his cuff, too," he said shortly. "Broken off when he fell."

There was nothing more to be said on this point. The link in the left sleeve was the mate of the broken link we had found.

He heard our story, and we walked down with him to show him where the body had lain. He listened very tentatively to our theory—that Hayward had attempted to flee from his enemy.

"It's a queer case," he told us then. "I don't know of any like it. As you say, he must have used something as heavy as a sledgehammer, and yet not hard like a sledgehammer. Anything very hard would have broken the skull into pieces, at the speed that it must have come. Those queer scratches are funny, too. But at least we've got the murderer pretty well sewed up. If he's in this house he can't get away—because already guards are watching the shores of the swamp. If he's on the highland, yonder, he can't get off them either, except into the water where my men will see him."

Soon after this the body was carried down to the boat. The negroes seemed all to have disappeared when the moment came, but Ahmad, inscrutable as ever, and the bewilkered old man that we called Robin, came to our aid. The inquest was to be held three days later, after the detectives had time to make their investigations.

"There's room for me, I hope?" I asked.

"Yes—"

"It will be necessary for me to leave this place and go back to my practice in Tampa."

Because I hadn't forgotten my promise of departure. Besides, there was no further reason for me to stay. Alexander Pierce had failed to come. I had just been a guest, a spectator, from the first, and Josephine had seen to it that I had been no more

The renouncement in the den the evening before had told that all too plainly. I couldn't deny to myself how much I would have liked to stay, to see the affair to its end, perhaps to behold the curse lifted from the old man's house, and to watch the shadows depart from those sad eyes. Never before had the thought of being of service been so dear to me. But the stand the girl had taken in the den was impossible to disregard.

Soon after this the body was carried down to the boat.

"I don't see why you can't go, Long. If you want," the Inspector said. "You were just a guest here—though I will say that you came at a propitious time—and, besides, both of the Southleys vouch for you. Vilas says you're innocent, and they say that you were in the library when the crime was committed. Of course, you must tell us where we caught you on a moment's notice."

I told them, and asked them to wait until I got my bag. It was all packed and ready. And as I came down from my room I met Josephine in the hall. She started back at the sight of me. I couldn't read the look that leaped to her face, except that it was a hurt look, almost a look of pleading. It was a surprise to me. Evidently she felt that she would miss whatever support I had been in these last nights of trial.

"You're going, after all," she said. She didn't put it as a question. She spoke as if it were some unbelievable circumstance.

"Of course I'm going. I'm afraid it does not surpass as a detective. Besides I've got to get back to my practice. Probably a hundred little fevered hands stretching to me—"

But her eyes arrested me and stopped the flow of my silly words.

"Perhaps you had forgotten—but we promised frankness. The first night at Southley Downs!"

"I had forgotten. Forgive me. And how long ago it was."

"And how much has happened since."

"How much—and this is the end." I stretched out my hand, and she gave me hers. I had always wondered at that hand. It was so yielding, seemingly so tender. But I dropped it quickly, wondering at the tremor on her lips.

"Goodbye, Miss Southley."

"May I walk with you down to the boat?"

"If you wish. But you remember—what is in the boat."

"I'm past all horror of that." She led the way out of the regat door and down the path. What a slight, slim creature she was! "And I suppose there is nothing—like I can tell you—that would make you stay?"

"You've already been very kind and sweet," I said. "I'm glad that you cared at all. But I don't see any use of keeping up the sorry game any longer. It can't help but come to unhappiness in the end. I want you to have all happiness—"

I could scarcely hear her answer. The tone was so low—hardly more than a whisper. Perhaps it was just a little tremulous.

"I don't think you are very kind, doctor," the words came back. "You don't understand."

"Unkind because I wish you happiness? At least I can do that—with propriety. There has been enough between us that I can do that. The walks we had—they will be very beautiful to think about."

"I wish you'd not say any more," But I went on remorselessly. "And don't think I'm going to be bitter. Women have always sacrificed for the men they loved—everything they had to sacrifice. No man can blame them if he is one of the sacrifices, as I was—in the den—last night."

She stopped as if I had struck her. "You mean—that you think I renounced you last night, that I let you fall when I could have saved you—because I loved Vilas Hayward?"

"I would sooner attribute it to that than to some less worthy reason. At least it showed me that your love for him was everything—that nothing in the world could stand in its way."

"Then there is no use in pleading with you any more, Dr. Long. Some time you may understand—and maybe be a little sorry. If you'd only stay, that time might be soon—before it is too late."

We could say no more. We had reached the boat. I shook hands with the Southleys; and, even as I said good-by, two strange impressions were knocking at the doors of my consciousness. They were not distinct. One of them was that old Robin was gazing at me with what was almost a look of abject bewilderment on his face; the other was that Josephine was whispering to Inspector Freeman—a hurried, urgent message.

When I looked at them they had moved to opposite sides of the group. His lean face was thoughtful. I gave my bag to the negro, and started to step into the boat.

"Wait just a minute, Dr. Long," the Inspector commanded.

I turned to him. "What is it?" "I've just been thinking—that I really haven't a right to let you go. I've learned that you had a scene with the elder Hayward—words and all that—on the night he was killed. It puts a different face on the situation; so I guess I'll have to command you to stay here until I know it is safe for me to let you go, doctor."

All the white occupants of Southley Downs—and that of course included the brown-skinned Ahmad, whose race is the root and source of the whole Ayran breed—met in the library immediately after the motor boat's departure. All of us stood chairs, and Inspector Freeman stood in the center.

"This isn't a third degree, or anything like it," he explained. "I'm simply in search of explanations. I want to know who's who, and who knows what."

He called on Vilas Hayward first. "Where were you on the night of the crime?" he asked.

"I went to bed at midnight."

"You were present in the den, in which you were insulted by Dr. Long?"

"Yes, sir. But I'm willing to forget that."

Yet his eyes did not look as if he were willing; they glowed darkly.

"But we're not willing to forget it," the detective replied. "The matter of motive for this murder is probably the most important feature in identifying the criminal. If we have a motive, we have something to work on. I believe that your father took your part in that discussion."

"That is true."

"And Southley did also."

"Vilas hesitated—just an instant. 'Yes, he supported me.'"

"I believe his daughter sided in with you, too."

"I would hardly say that."

"At least she offered no explanation why Dr. Long attacked you. Isn't that true?"

"It is."

"How did Dr. Long take this combined stand against him?"

"I don't know what you mean."

"It seems to me I am perfectly clear. Did he become angry?"

"I won't venture to say. It was plainly the greatest shock to him when Miss Southley took the attitude she did. I suppose my father gave him the greatest cause for anger."

"Why?"

"My father took the most determined stand against him, insisting on an apology or else a departure from the house."

"And what right did he have to insist that any of Southley's guests be told to go? What was his explanation for this breach of hospitality?"

The doctor was Southley's guest, not your father's. Why did your father feel he had a right to insist, in the terms he did, that Southley expel the doctor from his house?"

"I don't believe I know."

"Think a minute."

Vilas face darkened over so slightly. "I don't believe I care to have you question the manners of my dead father."

"It is a fair question."

"In spite of the difference in their ages, Southley and my father were old friends. They were very free with each other in all things."

"And did your father say anything of an insulting nature that the doctor might want to avenge?"

"He called him a 'pup' I think, as well as other things."

"You say you went to bed at midnight. When did you learn of your father's murder?"

"After the levee broke—when the others came back to the house and told me."

"The sound of the breaking levee awakened you?"

"Yes."

Freeman called on me next. I told my story, as far as it concerned the finding of the body. I corroborated most of Vilas's testimony.

"How much time were you alone after the scene in the den and the time of the murder?" he asked.

"A few minutes after a midnight walk with Ernest—between a few minutes before one o'clock and immediately after."

"How did you spend your time?"

"I was undressing for bed."

"And then what did you do?"

I told him of our stalk through the hills. He seemed particularly interested, but also somewhat scornful.

"It isn't the purpose of the State to chase down ghosts," he said. "I think the less thought and said about that matter the better. You all were under a nervous strain, and I've heard the testimony of people in that condition before. It usually isn't worth the paper it's written on. I want to know if you had any time to yourself between the scene in the den and the murder."

Of course his reason for wanting to know was perfectly obvious. He wanted to see whether I could have possibly had time to hire one of the negroes to murder the elder Hayward.

He knew that I had not done the deed with my own hands, from the fact that I had already established an alibi.

"We've got a motive for you, Long," he told me at the end, "but not much else. There are others that we have some of the other things, but no motive."

He called on Ahmad Das. The latter told him how he had gone out to the garage after the car; how he had looked in vain for Hayward on the driveway, and how, later, he had found the body.

The detective flushed slightly and leaned forward.

"You didn't like the elder Hayward, Ahmad?" Freeman asked abruptly.

"No, sahib."

"Why didn't you? What had he ever done to you?"

"He was not pleasant to serve, sahib. Many times he swore—"

"And I believe he struck you once, Ahmad."

Ahmad's voice lowered. "Yes."

"And why did he?"

"I was slow in a service that he asked."

BEAUTIFUL WETASKIWIN

Dear Sir:

God has given us a beautiful city. Let us not desecrate its spiritual beauty on the Sabbath day—the day set apart for rest, Bible study and worship—by taking part in games and sports. Set a good example to the young people and those who are to follow us.

Save the brotherhood, tear God, honor the King.

Thanking you for the space.

Yours truly,

JOHN McVICAR.

The "HOLT" Saves Grain

HARVESTING ON TIME

for Bigger Wheat Profits

Year after year great losses are suffered by wheat growers through delayed harvesting and bad weather conditions, largely because they are not prepared with quick, dependable harvesting equipment and tractors.

The "Holt" Combined Harvester plus the "Caterpillar" Tractor conquers every harvest condition—saves time, money, labor and ALL OF THE GRAIN.

MISS NORMA CHIDDY TO BE FEATURED AT BIG ATHLETIC
CARNIVAL HELD IN CARDSTON

Charlie Cheesman, president of the Alberta Branch of the A.A.U. of C., has, through B. W. Bellamy, of this city, made arrangements for the appearance of Miss Norma Chiddy, a featured athlete at the carnival being held by the Cardston Amateur Athletic Association, at the fair in Cardston on Thursday, August 15th, when she will appear in competition with Miss Bertha Hansen and others, and will give exhibitions in other events. Efforts were made to secure Miss Norma for the 24th of May sports in this town, but the invitation to participate in the Fort Saskatchewan sports had already been accepted. It is just possible that she may also appear in Medicine Hat.

CAMROSE WINS RAGGED
BALL GAME FROM MOOSE

The Wetaskiwin Moose baseball team was defeated on Wednesday evening, by the Camrose team. Although it was not a good exhibition of ball, yet the play created lots of excitement, for the spectators. It appeared at the outset as though the Moose would prove easy winners, as at the end of the third they had the visitors down 6-1, but aided by several errors and a grim determination to win, the Camrosians nosed out in the last inning by the score of 5-7. It is to be regretted that the manager of the visiting team was so unsportsmanlike as to call his team off the field in protest of the umpire's decision. There is no doubt that the umpire was correct in his ruling, as he was near the second base when the decision was made and it did not require a very close ruling, whereas the manager was on the players bench and therefore was not in a position to see the play to advantage. Scotvold pitched for the visitors, striking out seven. Rotvick did the twirling for the Moose during the first seven stanzas and retired nine by the strikeout route. Hodson pitched the last two innings, and fanned three. Jasman, Barnes, Thrisk and Cleland each got two batters, while Ryan gave the ball a clout which enabled him to reach third, but in his anxiety to score, he was tagged and the game was over. The box score follows:

RED DEER PLEASSED
WITH WETASKIWIN
GOLF TOURNAMENT

The Red Deer golfers enjoyed a most pleasant two days at Wetaskiwin golf tournament on June 30 and July 1. The sincere hospitality afforded by the Wetaskiwin club was outstanding, and thoroughly appreciated. A more enjoyable tournament could not take place in the west, and it is perhaps regrettable that Red Deer was not represented by a greater number of players.

The feature of the tournament was undoubtedly the playing of Mr. J. (Big Joe) Welsh, who decisively eliminated all of his last three opponents, each on the 16th green, to win the Western Alberta Amateur Championship, accompanied by a beautiful silver trophy and a silver tea serving set. When he learned that the latter was part of the prize there was no holding him, and he uncorked a sparkling short game that was absolutely deadly and caused each of his opponents to flourish his clubs with wild uncertainty. When it came to winning a tea service, you can't beat an Englishman. The championship was won by both a golfer and a gentleman. Halley Gatz was second, winning a wonderful set of Rogers "Pieces of Eight" cutlery.

Lyman Welliver did exceptionally well, winning three honors. He won the qualifying round with a nice 75, Mr. Prest of Wetaskiwin, being second with 78. The prize was a dozen photographs at Macdonald's, Edmonton. He won the long drive competition easily with a 285-yard drive, satisfying the gallery as to his being one of the longest drivers in the province. For this he received a golf sweater. Lastly he topped first place in the approaching and putting competition to receive a lovely goose-necked putter. Edmonton, Camrose, Stettler and Hanna also sent representatives. It was a great event—Red Deer Advocate.

GIRLS' TRAIN FOR ATHLETIC TRACK MEETS

Branching out to train girl athletes for athletic meets throughout the province, the Olympic committee of the Central Sports Association, started Wednesday afternoon with eight girls turning out at Hillhurst Park. Fred Gardner, physical director of the Central Y.M.C.A., and also chairman of the committee, is in charge and Mrs. Clarin is acting as matron.

The Olympic committee is training a fine group of athletes at Victoria Park and as there are track and field events for girls at the Wetaskiwin sports and also at Edmonton the committee decided to assemble a girls' team to represent the city at these sports.

The names of ten girls have been turned in and they will be out every Wednesday and Saturday at Hillhurst Park, starting at 3 o'clock.

At the Edmonton sports there are competitors for girls on August 3 and 5 and the Ladies' Alberta championships will be held at Wetaskiwin on August 7, when the provincial junior meet is held.

The girls are being coached in starting for sprints as well as in the jumps and Mr. Gardner would like those who would be interested in coaching to get in touch with him.

The girls who have turned in their names and intend to be out training with the Olympic committee are: Phyllis Ethridge, Helen Ford, Jessie Lees, Eileen Rushworth, Mabel Cheek, Jessie McLean, Betty Campbell, Rose Pelley, Sarah Jaffe and P. Wilkins.

In the boys' training the committee is making splendid progress with more than 50 boys taking advantage of the opportunity to get out with competent coaches. The training sessions are held every Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings at Victoria Park grand stand enclosure, but during the Stampede they will train at Hillhurst Park. At the present time arrangements are being made to have races run during half time at soccer games—Calgary Herald.

menace the Province is up against in connection with noxious weeds. He referred to what had happened in the Province of Manitoba, and hopes that by taking the matter in hand this Province will not suffer in the way that Province has. The work of this Committee at the present time is to put on a campaign of education so that farmers and the citizens generally will realize what harm is being done by noxious weeds. The speaker stated that the facts show clearly that the protein value of our wheat is being cut down at the present time to a great extent, and the Board feels that this is being brought about largely by weeds taking the nitrates out of the soil. Good farming methods, the use of good clean seed, and in that connection the growing of a type of seed that could be used and sold for seed purposes, would in a few years control this danger to the agricultural interests of our Province. Mr. Stevens showed clearly that if farmers would grow registered grain for seed, that they would profit greatly by it in that they would be able to sell their products at a greatly enhanced price, and the fact that one farmer in the community did it would set an example to others and the benefit would be very great. Further than that, if the protein qualities of grain are kept up our Canadian grain will sell in Europe at a premium as it used to do a number of years ago. Mr. Stevens left a number of pamphlets on the Weed Problem of Alberta with the members present, and any one desiring information on this very important subject can obtain these pamphlets upon inquiry from members of the Kiwanis Club. The speaker was given a very hearty vote of thanks at the conclusion of his address.

Mr. Neils Linden, one of the farmers of our district, who has made a great success of registered grain for seed purposes, spoke for a few moments and told the meeting something of what he had been able to do in connection with the growing of the different grains for seed purposes.

AIR MAIL WILL SPAN
DOMINION IN FEW YEARS

Ottawa, July 5.—"Air mail services will be inaugurated shortly between Montreal and Detroit, and between Toronto and Buffalo, which will further advance mail connections not only between this country and the United States, but with cities in western Ontario, such as Hamilton, London and Windsor," declared Hon. P. J. Veniot, postmaster-general, speaking over the radio from station CNRO, Ottawa, last night.

"The department hopes to inaugurate the practice of air mail services between Winnipeg, Regina, Moose Jaw and Calgary, and between Regina, Saskatoon, North Battleford and Edmonton, some time during the coming autumn. These services will afford a twenty-four hour saving in time in the movement of mails from terminus to terminus and will give comparative advances to intermediate points," Mr. Veniot said.

Alberta Exhibits for American Fairs This Season

Alberta will again be advertised this season by an exhibit of agricultural products and natural resources to be shown at a number of state and county fairs through the middle western States. Arrangements have been completed by the Publicity Branch of the Department of Agriculture to show this display at fairs in Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas during August and September. A marked increase in the interest shown in the opportunities for settlement in Alberta and in emigration to the province is reported from the localities in which similar exhibits have been shown during the past few years.

Alberta Health Officials Honored
Magistrate Emily Murphy of Edmonton; Hon. George Hoadley, Minister of Health; Dr. M. R. Bow, Deputy Minister of Health, and Dr. Harold Orr of Edmonton, have been elected officers of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council at a recent meeting of this organization held in Montreal.

To Start Northern Aerial Service
Plans are announced by the Western Canada Airways for the opening of an office in Edmonton with Lieut. C. H. Dickens, holder of the McKee trophy, as district superintendent. This move is in preparation for northern expansion and the establishment of air mail service on the prairies during the coming fall. Two of the company's planes, it is stated, will fly on regular schedule between Edmonton and points on the Mackenzie River providing service for the far northern areas where much exploration work is being carried on.

Will Eliminate Dangerous Level Crossings

The contribution of some $13,227 from the railway grade crossing fund as part of the cost of diverting certain roads in the northern section of the province and eliminating 10 level crossings was authorized by the Board of Railway Commissioners in session in Edmonton during the past week. This amount represents 40 per cent of the estimated cost of these diversions, the remaining portion of the cost being borne by the Alberta Department of Public Works. Dangerous level crossings will thus be avoided on the Edmonton-Lloydminster highway near Chipman, on the Wetaskiwin-Hayter road west of Canmore, on the Edmonton-Wainwright highway near Brotona and Fort Saskatchewan and a diversion will locate few crossings on the Willingdon-Strathcona line.

HARVESTING AND THRESHING BARLEY FOR MALTING

(Experimental Farms Note)

A sample of barley suitable for making malt must be pure as to variety, uniform as to maturity, and thoroughly matured; a mixture of varieties will give lack of uniformity. The sample must not be injured and must be free from other grains and weed seeds.

Presuming that the crop to be harvested is from pure seed of a known variety, much can be done now to insure a good sample from the maltsters' viewpoint. Firstly the grain must be fully matured, in other words, "dead ripe"; there must be no green kernels or immature kernels in the sample. If necessary, save for the malting sample, only the parts of the field that are free from signs of greenness, and put the rest of the grain in a separate bin. This extra work insures a sample that the maltster will buy, and consequently commands a better price. The grain after cutting, should be allowed to cure in the stock for a short time, but must not be left too long, as owing to the inclement weather often experienced at this time, injury may occur from sprouting in the stock, or bad discoloration.

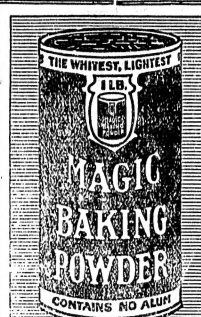

Careful threshing is just as important as careful harvesting. Many a good crop has been ruined by careless threshing. Good barley must be free from broken or skinned kernels, too close threshing will cause this. It is better to have a little of the awn adhering to the kernels than by close threshing to have the hull skinned off, as this injury allows the entrance of moulds, and a consequent deterioration in the malt produced from the grain. By the use of proper screens in the threshing, many of the weed seeds can be removed, thus lessening the work in re-cleaning the grain up to the required standard for malting.

BABY'S FOOD

Every baby should be breast-fed. There are few mothers who cannot nurse their babies if they try to do so, and there are few mothers who would not make the effort if they understood how important it is that the baby should have his natural food. There is no other milk, or no preparation which is just as good as breast milk. Breast milk is purer, cleaner and more easily digested than any other food, and it requires no preparation.

Mothers sometimes wean their babies because they think that they have not enough milk, or that the quality of their milk is not good. This is a serious mistake. Every effort should be made to keep up the quantity available, and it is much better for the baby that he receive some breast milk than none at all. If there is not sufficient breast milk, the necessary supplementary amount of nourishment is given after the nursing according to the feeding formula given by the physician.

The baby should be fed at regular intervals. Not only is this desirable from the standpoint of his digestion, but it is important as the start of proper habits in the child. If he is asleep at nursing time, he should be awakened, and he should not be allowed to fall asleep while he is at the breast. The feeding takes from ten to fifteen minutes. After feeding, the baby should be held up over the shoulder in order to allow him to get rid of the air which he has swallowed. During the hot weather particularly, the fact that babies become thirsty should not be forgotten, and the baby should be offered cooled water, previously boiled if there is any question of purity, between feedings.

Under ordinary conditions, the baby is nursed for eight or nine months; longer periods are not good for the child. The baby should not be weaned suddenly upon the advice of the doctor who will advise as to what diet he is to receive. As a rule, babies are not weaned during the hot summer months.

Breast-feeding makes for stronger, healthier babies, and it protects them from the dangers of disease. Artificial feeding, even of the highest quality, is, at the best, an attempt to imitate the natural feeding.

Questions, concerning health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally by correspondence.

NORTH CLUB HOLDS FIELD DAY

The Northern Alberta Amateur Breeders' Club, with membership extending from Red Deer north, held their annual field day on Tuesday, June 26, and the event was classified as being one of the best which that club has held yet. The weather was excellent and the spot chosen for the event was ideal, for it was held on the farm of Mr. Maxwell, a short distance west of Wetaskiwin, and right at the edge of a lake.

Dr. C. P. Marker, dairy commissioner for Alberta; S. G. Carlyle, livestock commissioner for Alberta, and A. G. More, dairy promoter for the province, ranked among those attending. Dr. Marker gave a very interesting address on cream and butter in the province and outside. Mr. Carlyle gave an interesting demonstration on judging, while Mr. Moore spoke on the cow testing work which is being done in the province.

DOINGS IN ELKDOME

Don't forget the regular meeting on Tuesday, July 9. A large attendance is necessary as final arrangements for the Pigeon Lake picnic on July 24 and School Fair sports on Sept. 5 must be made.

A large attendance of ladies from Wetaskiwin lodge were present on Friday evening last to help initiate eight of our local ladies into the O.R.P. After the initiation a program was put on by the ladies and enjoyed by all ladies and Elks present. Mr. R. Coote gave a couple of vocal selections which were greatly appreciated. A light lunch was served followed by an hour's dancing—Leduc Representative.

When first a voter buys a car he's so afraid that dirt will mar its shining surface, he will spend his energy for hours on end; he'll take a costly camoils skin and polish it outside and in, and use a magnifying glass inspecting nickel knobs and brass, and if he sees a speck of dust, or notes a little flake of rust, he throws some seven fits in line, and chills run up and down his spine. He takes a lantern out at night to see the motor is all right, and all the polishes in town he purchases to rub it down. He jaws the children and repeat, and tells them where to put their feet, and threatens to divorce his wife if she brings snow on his life in eating candy in the wain, and leaving on the push a stain. And if he has an accident, and has a shining fender bent, he raves around like one distraught,

Riding on the Roof of the Rockies

SHADOW LAKE UNDER THE SHADOW OF MT. BALL

Among the most spectacular of the Trail Rides ever attempted in the Canadian Rockies will be the one proposed to start August 8 and lasting 18 days, to take in a long distance ride to the Columbia Icefield from Lake Louise. This icefield is the largest body of glacial ice left on the North American continent covering 150 square miles and surrounded by peaks from ten to twelve thousand feet in height. The ride will be from Lake Louise up the Bow Valley to Bow Lake, over Bow Pass and by the Misty Mountain Waterfalls to the North Saskatchewan River, then up the Alexandra River Valley to Castleguard and the Columbia Icefields. Only Trail Riders holding at least the silver button, emblematic of completion of 100 miles of trail riding, will be permitted to join the expedition, since all taking part must satisfy the committee that they will not prove a burden to the rest of the party.

For less experienced Trail Riders, or those who cannot spare the time, there will be a four-day ride starting from Banff August 1 and ending at Castle Mountain Bungalow Camp. It will take in the Egypt Lake district, which will be accessible for the first time this summer, so that those participating in this ride may regard themselves as pioneers. Beautiful Shadow Lake under Mount Ball will be the camp site of the riders on the second day out and, in all, seven glacier-fed lakes will be on the route of the trail.

How to Play BRIDGE

ARTICLE No. 21

Good "Card Manners" should be cultivated by every card player, not only because they make the game more pleasant but also because they are a winning proposition. A player has a much better chance to win with a partner who is satisfied and happy than with one who is upset by constant and unpleasant criticism. Try it out and you will be surprised at the good results.

One player in particular of the writer's acquaintance has perfect card manners. He makes every bid in the same even tone of voice (how often players improperly convey a meaning by making a bid emphatically or hesitatingly). He never hesitates in playing a card with the object of making the opponents think that he has something in his hand which actually is not there; and if he has a bad partner, he seeks every opportunity of congratulating him on a correct play and never refers to errors. Thereby he gets the best out of the bad partner. Cultivate good card manners and you will automatically increase your winnings.

In the preceding article twelve problems have been discussed in an English competition were given for the reader to decide upon the proper bids. The hands were as follows:

SYMPATHY

(By Edgar A. Guest)

He had suffered pain and knew
All his friend was going through.
He had known long weeks of dread
Tossing on a sleepless bed.

He had watched that narrow hall
For a friend to come and call.

So he journeyed from his way
Just a cheery word to say.

Stopped from time to time to see
What the sufferer's need might be.

Others left him there alone,
Pain like that they'd never known.

Only those who've lonely been
Know what loneliness can mean.

Sympathy is but a word,
Save by memories it's stirred.
Who would share another's woe
Must it's hurt and anguish know.

THE BOYS WE NEED

The boys of whom the time has need
Are boys that will not shrink,
But bring to tasks they undertake
A love for honest work.

It is from such like this, my lad,
The years will make the man,
So face the future with a will
To do the best you can.

It may not be your lot to lead
To victory in the fight,
Upon a bloody battlefield
Where men may die for right.

But you may wage a silent war
Against all wrong and sin,
And be a hero, all the same,
Because you fight with win.

It takes true bravery to be
A champion of right
In days like these, where men bow down

Like slaves to worship might.
But know, my lad, that he who fights
For love and fellow man,
And truth, will surely win, because
He'll do the best he can.

It matters little where our work,
Or what may be its name,
If to its doing we can bring
Clean hands and lofty aim.

So, lad, whatever you undertake,
Be sure to do your best,
Be true to manhood's better self
And trust God for the rest.

ANNUAL CONVENTION
PONOKA PROVINCIAL CONSTITUENCY ASSOCIATION

The annual convention of Ponoka Provincial Constituency Association was held in the U.F.A. hall on Friday afternoon—Mr. Archibald Wallace, president, in the chair.

Some considerable time was taken up with administrative affairs. Reports of committees were read and adopted. Mrs. H. E. Russell, secretary, gave a very gratifying report, showing that the association was in good shape financially.

Officers for the ensuing year were appointed as follows: President, Mr. Roy Vold; Vice-President, Mrs. John Kretting; Secretary-treasurer, Mrs. H. E. Russell.

The meeting was favored with the presence of three leading members of the organization—Premier Brownlee, Hon. Mrs. Parly and Mrs. A. H. Warr.

Mrs. Warr was the first speaker, and at once captivated her audience. She commenced by stating that she was pleased to be in Ponoka, and this being her first visit, trusted that it would not be the last. She is a pleasing speaker, and her remarks were closely followed. Her address was mainly on the work among the young people, and what can be accomplished through organization.

Mrs. Parly, always a favorite, spoke along educational lines. She gave a resume of her recent visit to Europe. The changes that were taking place in matters pertaining to education in Great Britain were dealt with, and in a measure were held up in comparison to our present educational system in Alberta. While the proposed new school act may not be perfect in every respect she advised her hearers to get away from the small things, she would take care of themselves, and look at this great question of education in a broad way, to use her own phrase "a fundamental creative education." She was strong on the new act, and asked that the loyal support of the people of Alberta be given the government in their effort.
